Solvusoft's close relationship with software companies combined with over 10 million satisfied customers and 46 years of resources gives us tremendous competitive advantages. So this tells my outlook is that you should get more formal proof to be added to the question and then post that. One more question, you indicated that in your question, what you wanted is to show up both concepts. In other words, what I want is to prove both equivalency of two algorithms and the completeness of one algorithm. Please correct me, if I am wrong, or point me to the correct answer. A: Solutions to questions in either direction are fine. I would say make sure the solutions to the forward direction are in the correct order in the answer, but that can be hard to verify without a full version of the question. In the answers the solutions are in the order I would pick, which is not necessarily the same as in the guestion. In some cases there is just more to cover and some of the concepts are more important, or there's some other question that I didn't see. I am probably going to suggest you just leave the question open and say in your title "what would be an effective way to test (...)". The answer will cover your solution to the forward direction. Q: ACLS runtime security in ASP.net So i have inherited an existing ASP.net website which has a login control that uses Forms Authentication to authenticate users to a service for a simple social networking application we're developing. During testing I've noticed that after a few days the site doesn't get this message. "This page is temporarily unavailable. This is a server error: The website's security settings do not allow frames to... This message only pops up when a user is logged in and they try to navigate to a page protected by the ACLS (Access Control List) security feature. So I have been looking into how to disable/remove this security feature. I've found this article - Security Error In order for us to use it we need to change our web.config file. I've tested this by removing the section in web.config and also removed all of the settings from the web.config under the configuration settings node. I then restarted the web server but this had no effect and the Barefoot Honey Badgers Natural Honey Is A Natural Protectant And Antibiotic. Alternative Book Store: We Support Fair Housing.Q: Can I say "I am going to plant these trees soon"? Possible Duplicate: What is the correct grammar for "to make + infinitive"? I want to say I am going to plant these trees soon. Is it OK to say this, or is there a more proper phrase to use here? A: As Rory says, just plant the trees is a very common thing to do (and "soon" could mean "very soon"): I'm going to plant those trees in a few days. You can say "plant those trees next week" if you want. You could say "I am going to plant those trees, and I will plant them in the morning", "I am going to plant them in the morning", or even "planting those trees is going to happen soon". A: Sometime soon means about any time soon. No, you should just say "I'm going to plant the trees." or "Planting the trees is going to happen soon." Your NAME is REQUIRED - It's Simple!
